Future cities

By Kiriaki Kallou

This is my project on how the cities will look like in 2050. Our environment will become day by day weaker. People will be dying from pandemics. The air will be more polluted. And all sources will shorten.
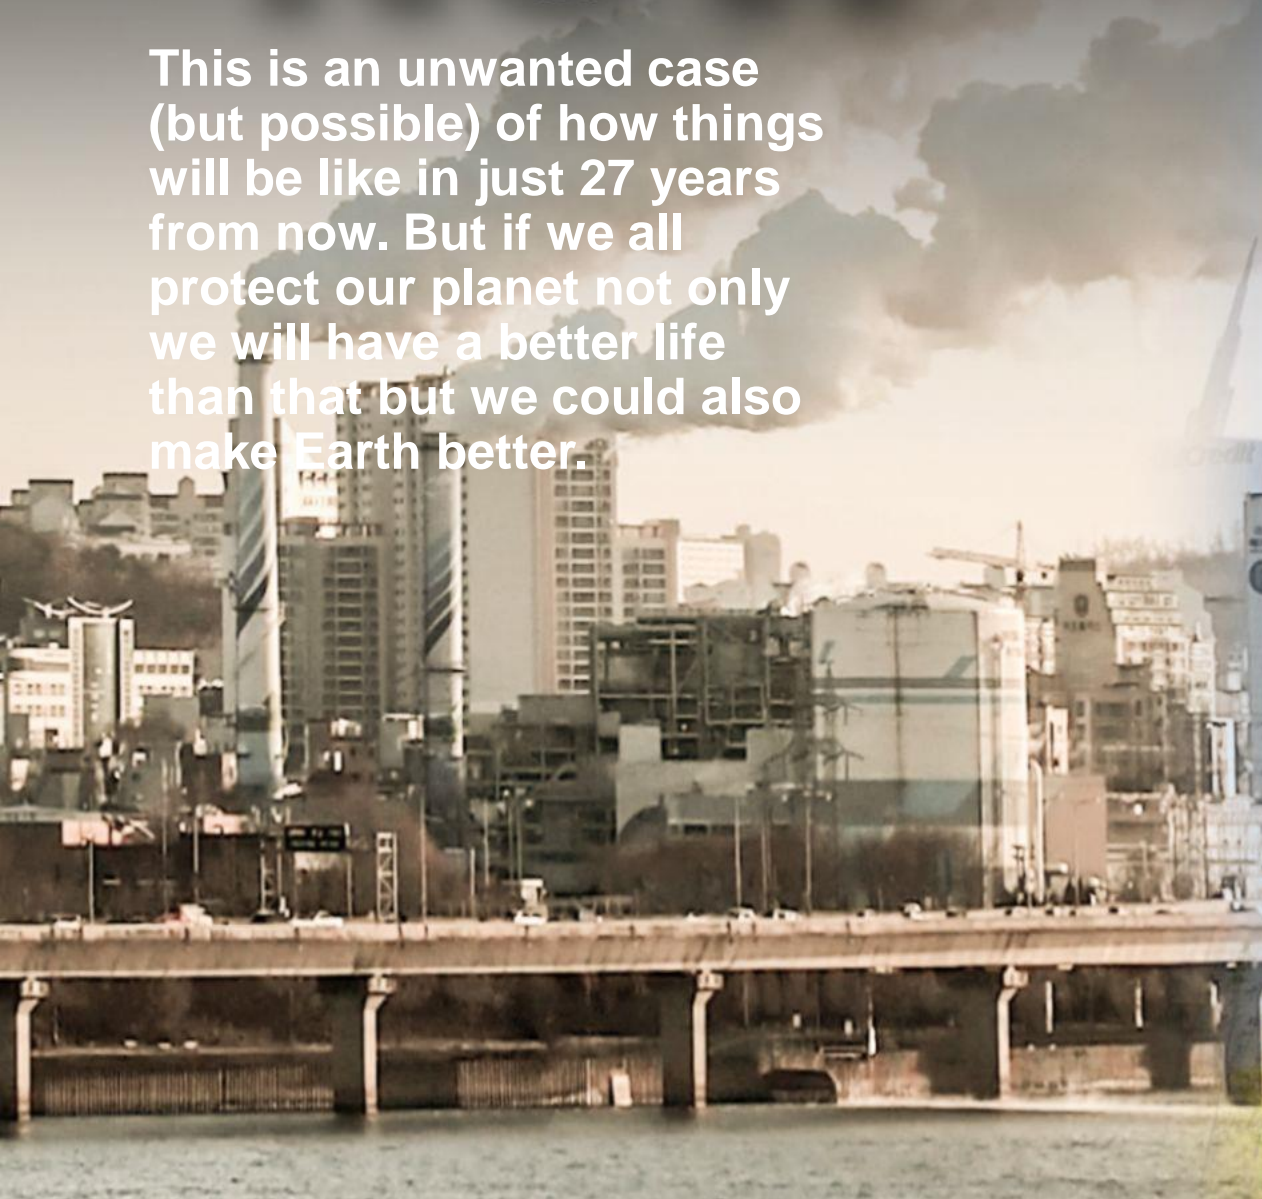

People will wear silver clothes like a robot. They will be full of golden chains/jewelries. Whenever they get out they will have to wear special uniforms to protect them from the toxic rain and also a mask which protects them from breathing the polluted air.

Most people will work as programmers or as scientists. There will still be some doctors or teachers, but they won't be as many as it used to be and they will be getting paid very little.

The nature will be all destroyed. No trees will be left. And you are going to ask me: how will they breath? They will have masks which turn carbon dioxide to oxygen. But they won't work as good as the trees and people will die from this. The seas and the oceans will be polluted and they will be full of rubbish.

NOW

FUTURE

This is an unwanted case (but possible) of how things will be like in just 27 years from now. But if we all protect our planet not only we will have a better life than that but we could also make Earth better.
